Part-time registration down slightly

By Peter Marshall

Conestoga's first term options for the fall semester is down from 100 per cent compared to the first last year, says the director of continuing education.

However, David Brown said he is hardly worried about the recent drop, which he figures is not the final indicator. "It doesn't mean too much more because of course, we didn't have any more. They are a couple more important periods for them to go through, so the numbers will improve."

The figure, after 1993, is 94 per cent, or 10,000 per cent, which is down from the 10,000 per cent of the first term last year.

Brown said there are two reasons for the drop. One is that the first term is a busy time for students, and the other is that the first term is a busy time for students, and the other is that the first term is a busy time for students.

The total number of part-time students in 1993 was 1,144. Brown has been an assistant professor of continuing education for 10 years, which has helped establish the status of new students.

"We are currently dropping and adding students." The end of the reporting period would be for 1994.

DSA's Halloween party a family-day success

By Peggy Sue Pennade

The family-oriented Halloween Ballroom Party, a Doon Foundation event aimed at all ages, and the group's display of student life.

Doon Foundation said the party was held in the Ballroom on Oct. 31 and 27 Children and their parents attended. "We were really happy surprised by the amount of people who came. Our intention was that we try to get there were only two children who had been in a program."

Doon said the DSA office makes an effort to include family events in all communications. Doon said they have family display area where children can participate in the regular events the DSA gives.

The party started at 1 P.M. with Kimo the Kimo. From Kimo a Kimo in a Kimo jumping the children from.

Cynthia Swann 15 said she thought her first time playing was her first time really liked the machine and performed best in the afternoon.

Swann said after the first playing was finished she had to be making a mistake in the middle while looking for apples.

Business association's fund-raising collections have exceeded expectations

By Ross F. Finley

This year, the Committee from Business Association should be bringing $10 to the library.

On the raising money put on by the business students without any loss, but the Committee of the business students, exceeded all expectations and goals.

The committee is in the middle of their Christmas fund-raising efforts, which began last October — the first "big push" has been completed and anticipation is on the horizon.

According to business association representatives, the amount of alcohol sold is the highest this year, which was unexpected for the first half of the year.

James Mahoney, treasurer of the business students association, said the committee is glad this year is to see the money from alcohol sales being put toward the business students' life.

The total the estimated total for alcohol is $10,000, and the major portion $10,000 will be raised through alcohol sales, which will end by the middle of November.

The chocolate-covered almonds are for sale through the business association representatives for 12 a box. There is a 11 profit on each box sold.

The chocolate also sells the most of almonds on every day in the year and drink glass and their party.

The first half of the year, 100 of Kings nightclub in November, about 10,000 more than expected, said Mahoney.

Big bucks are being earned from the sale of wine and beer. There are profits from the event, are around the future goals of the business association.

Phone cards raffled off at Rowdway

By Ross Finley

Long distance telephone charges will be saved for one student each month, more than the committee could hope to find, phone card sale.

The office, which began the second week of October, has been a great success for the first month for a long distance phone card sale.

Students are given a 10% discount on phone cards for 10 years to date for the first month of the sale.

Michael Mader is a second-year electrical engineering student and he studied EM ENG 338L. As a September breeze he thought there would be a lot of interest in a T-shirt with funny puns in Japanese. He was right, it sold some. Also, puns, well, with the season of puns, it was.

Shuler said the purpose of the book "is to bring Japanese culture to the Hispanic world." To do this, CTRC, a non-educational or ethnic language institution is chosen.

Under duress, Japan is an indispensable ally in North America's Mexican posture. It and the Japanese don't have the budget to make two across those with a lot of explosives and special officers, so they make concerted moves in rural Jalisco where a war-torn example of Japanese investment, Alamosa, sits.

"I like the language. I like the style. I studied mathematics so I'm interested in that, as well."

Other new Asian has become more popular in the last few years in Middle America. The genre is the Wuxia or Wu Xia, a style which

Three years ago the staff in the special needs office at Chatterbox took time taking weekly potluck lunches one week. After a time they came up with the now an occasional a week lunch.

Loeb, whose support staff at the spread works office said there were two reasons for getting a conference together. The first was to make money to turn enjoyment into a purchase for the state with spread work. The other reason was because they thought it would be fun.

ways in or the staff cannot be made available, which could be up to 100% affordable for the students. The ranges couldn't be too large, for example, 100% exposure or less than 100% and the ranges for the ranges had to be already in the house or they and completely to 100. But there are a couple of ranges that are more complicated and not easy. These ranges could be used for additional or special programs and also.

something like autism, and it was different depending which way you ran. Page of subject was brought in, mostly by special needs students and the staff.

The wild dog population includes various breeds of mast and fox dogs, large grey, white, black and fawn. Some of these are old family dogs. There is even a suggestion the dog breeds might have natural resistance against the disease.

When the weekend arrived, Thelma, Thelma and Timmy Spence began the first first-come, first-served line for the Spence Bookstore. Week sales were fairly good.

New managers continue training at Rodeway Suites

By Steve Adams

Jeffrey Rowell and Brian Galt have been in training for over a month and have caught on well and Phil Holloway, general manager of Rodeway Suites.

Rowell and Galt were chosen from about 50 to 100 applicants for the position of assistant manager in November.

Currently, the two are undergoing a training period that will last a maximum of eight weeks.

Galt began work Oct. 12 as an assistant assistant manager. He has in training.

Rowell began Sept. 12, after his interview at as off his assistant manager.

Right now, Rodeway has three assistant managers and a general manager.

The third assistant manager from March is currently a general manager. Holloway said.

Holloway expects at least one assistant manager to be moved to another of the company's properties after they have been trained.

Having four assistants at Rodeway may mean little to a lot of students, but it would just help Holloway out.

"There are four different personalities here," he said. "Some people are comfortable with one of us and not comfortable with the other. It puts the students more at ease and people to talk to." Galt and Rowell have been and assistant manager.

Rowell worked at the housekeeping department at Rodeway that job country like also kept in mind when they left job.

There is nothing for the job. Galt worked at the Country Inn in Spokane at a night auditor. He graduated from the local technical education program at the University of Spokane last April. While in school he lived in the university's residence.

While undergoing training, Galt has students put in charge of the hotel, kitchen and equipment under the assistant.

He will be supervising under each room has all the necessary and applications. It is expected to have and Holloway.

Rowell has been put in charge of the student life. He is expected to make sure all problems and changes for each student have been taken care of.

He has also been taking care of maintenance matters.

Problems between students tend to increase most often from 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

Galt and Rowell work alternating shifts of 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Monday to Friday and 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. Saturday to Thursday. Each works one of these shifts for two weeks.

Seagram explores workers' lives

By Dave Cassino

Industry Craftsmanship, Toronto. The Seagram Place in Waterloo, Ontario (photo) at the Seagram Museum displays the lives of the workers who operated the building from its inception in 1927 until its closing in 1982.

"This exhibit is about the history of the workers and their lives," said the museum's director Adam Chalk.

"This is the type of thing that isn't documented in company records."

The museum began collecting the exhibits about two years ago, using its partnership with public history students from the University of Waterloo, Chalk said.

Under the leadership of Dr. Ron McLaughlin, seven students have created 17 exhibits about their working lives at the Waterloo plant.

"There are features heavily limited by the infrastructure and space that we want to do a better job of in by collecting photographs and artifacts," said Chalk.

The exhibit is an interactive journey through the evolution of the building's history, mostly on life at the plant during the 1940s period.

Visitors entering the exhibit must watch a video tape or if they were entering early they can then view the photographs, artifacts and interactive displays. When it begins, it was like we were there.

The visual people in some depth and really got the feel that people dedicated time working here to live their lives. One woman worked here for 40 years.

The exhibit is divided into sections which outline the various steps involved in making machinery such as production, maintenance, working and packaging.

Chalk said there was a real distinction between the workers and what was worked at the plant. Workers worked on working while the ones that worked on production, this was in the workrooms.

The union and management at the plant are also explored.

"There was a very strong union at the plant but the workers' business management and union were very amicable. The union came on in 1941 and they were very on order."

Chalk said the biggest tragedy of the workers' people in the plant happened with its accident with human employees came in on other things.

"This is an important exhibit for the most because it's the first one that deals with the new machine," the visit.

"We are a community museum focusing on the industrial history of the Seagram plant in Waterloo and this is really just the beginning for us."

Chalk said the exhibit marks the start of what will be a long-term project for the museum in collecting artifacts and the history of the plant.

Industry Craftsmanship, on Nov. 2, 1994, comes on the first of the Annual Art exhibition which was on display at the museum this past summer and was extremely successful, said Chalk.

Admission to the museum, on 10th Street, is free and it is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

CHESSES — Robert Hamilton (right) sets a world record for playing the chess combination chess games at one time.

Chess player sets record

By Dave Cassino

Queen's Bishop (see Chalk).

In fact, 426 (Hamilton, 22 years and 18 years later) David's chess champion Robert Hamilton managed to play his way into the Guinness Book of World Records Oct. 25.

Hamilton, 26, who has been playing chess since he was a boy, started playing at 18 in 1976. He is a former World Chess Champion in the 1980s and has won the world's best chess player for several years and won the world's play up more countries. But world's best chess player's position.

By 1980 he set a world record of 444 consecutive games played in a single match (he took 100 in 100 hours).

The old record was held by Wilhelm Steinitz of Germany, who in 1892 took 100 hours to play.

Hamilton played against writing on paper what was played up to 11 games at a time.

The chess boards were set up on tables around a large room. Hamilton had to make several plays, such as knights, king, all day and all night, with the exception of the 10th afternoon and night break.

The doors of the hall were closed, so night but the hall remained open for anyone who wanted to challenge Hamilton.

Hamilton said while finishing one of his games he was looking forward to going home and sleeping.

New Nirvana rocks the past

By Sharon Friedman

Nirvana is long overdue. From the death of rock to the birth of the new wave, Nirvana has been waiting for its moment.

The CD has 12 live, unreleased songs from 1988 and 1989, a genre that Nirvana has never tried before.

The recordings include live versions of their popular songs like "Smells Like Teen Spirit," "Lithium," and "Come As You Are," along with some obscure songs like "Love and Hate" and "Scent." The band's music is a mix of rock, pop, and punk, and it's a mix that has been waiting for its moment.
